

Lecture Summary

Spotted deer and macaques collaborate on lookout duty, except at watering holes where macaques chase deer away. Consequently, monkeys rely on their own vigilance. Deer aren't bothered by the hunting tiger, who needs to be successful for her cubs, consuming significant meat quantities. Eureka